Founded in 1887, Clark University is an exceptionally diverse, socially engaged, small research university with a strong liberal arts core. Critical to success in today's world, Clark students gain relevant competencies including critical thinking, resilience, and the ability to tackle complex challenges. Each year, over 2,000 undergraduate and graduate students receive degrees from Clark and secure positions with corporations, government, and nonprofit organizations. Clark is built for the kind of unconventional and independent thinking that allows us to value the imperfect and navigate the unexpected. We move through the world with confidence and curiosity, eager to discover what awaits and emboldened to act when our moment arises. Clark University's mission is to educate undergraduate and graduate students to be imaginative and contributing citizens of the world, and to advance the frontiers of knowledge and understanding through rigorous scholarship and creative effort. The Clark Experience prepares students to be creative, imaginative, and bold thinkers who are ready to challenge convention and change our world. Clark brings together the exceptional education students receive with a thoughtfully integrated system of career preparation, skill building, hands-on learning, wellness resources, and community connections. Clark is one of only 40 schools nationwide featured in Loren Pope's book Colleges that Change Lives, based on its commitment to undergraduate research, diversity, civic values, social change, and its unique program of liberal studies. Also notable, Clark is ranked by The Princeton Review as No. 16 Best Schools for Making an Impact and No. 3 Undergraduate Game Design program in the world. The University hosts a virtual career fair in October and an on-campus all majors career fair in March. For questions about recruiting, please contact the Career Connections Center (CServices@clarku.edu).

Clark University, School of Climate, Environment and Society 950 Main Street, Worcester, MA Sharon Hanna, Director Career Development and External Relations shanna@clarku.edu 508-793-7454 launched Fall 2025, Clark's new School of Climate, Environment, and Society is a bold and exciting response to the world's most pressing call to action. CES builds on Clark's long legacy of climate-related work in the natural sciences, social sciences, and humanities — accelerating the discovery of human-focused, community-centered solutions. Students and graduates untangle the interconnected climate, environmental, societal, and economic crises, and develop solutions. Our faculty come from across the university, contributing deep expertise in conservation, earth science, economics, geography and GIS, sustainability and social justice, and urban issues

Founded in 1843, College of the Holy Cross is a highly selective, four-year college of approximately 3,200 students. Ranked among the nation's leading four-year liberal arts colleges, Holy Cross offers an academically challenging and personally fulfilling education in the Jesuit tradition. The Holy Cross experience is characterized by an emphasis on open exploration and far-ranging curiosity that inspires our students to ask more of themselves — academically, spiritually, and in their personal development. Holy Cross graduates go on to lead meaningful lives that marry passion and purpose in positions ranging from members of Congress and leading scientific researchers to CEOs in the business and nonprofit sectors. Together, our alumni constitute a loyal family—and powerful global network—of successful professionals and engaged citizens. Employers are invited to post jobs, internships, and recruiting events free of charge to Holy Cross students via Handshake

Nichols College transforms today's students into tomorrow's leaders through a dynamic, career-focused business and professional education. Since its founding in 1815, Nichols has inspired its students to succeed in their careers and in life. The College's innovative academic programs combine business, liberal arts, technology, and experiential learning to prepare professionals for the workplace of tomorrow. Consulting projects, research initiatives, Bloomberg certification, a student-managed investment fund, and a strong foundation in data science and emerging technologies are just some of the opportunities available to our students. In 2023, the Nichols College School of Business earned accreditation from the prestigious Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB), the longest serving global accrediting body for business schools and the largest business education network connecting learners, educators, and businesses worldwide. High-impact, hands-on learning experiences are embedded throughout the curriculum. Employers are welcome to visit our Handshake site to post internships and jobs, and to register for events such as our two annual career fairs held in February and September.

Founded in 1865, WPI was one of the nation's earliest technological universities. At WPI learning has always been about combining theory and practice. Our multi-dimensional approach to education yields more than just graduates; it helps create innovators, inventors, entrepreneurs and most important, leaders. Our academic departments offer more than 50 undergraduate and graduate degree programs leading to bachelor's, master's and PhD degrees, as well as an array of professional certificates. WPI students work side by side with faculty members at the apex of their fields in world-class research facilities. Our professors are committed researchers and scholars who bring their love of research into their classrooms and labs and give students countless opportunities to get involved and solve real-world problems. From the Great Problems Seminars, to the Humanities and Arts project, to the Global Perspective Program, WPI students are tackling some of the most critical problems facing our world today and having life-changing experiences while they're learning. We don't just believe in making the world a better place though science, technology, the arts and humanities – we actually do it. For more information about our employer services and how to post a job for WPI students to see, go to www.wpi.edu/+hireWPI.
